Best Practices for Dispute Avoidance and Management

The ASCE Construction Institute's Claims Avoidance and Resolution Committee presents a compendium of the Committee membership's best practices addressing:

- Delay Claim Management
- Contract Changes Clauses
- Constructability Reviews
- Project Delivery Methods

Construction projects are fraught with claims and change orders. The Claims Avoidance and Resolution Committee, construction industry professionals whose work and experience focuses on pro-active dispute avoidance management, have compiled their years of experience to present a set of Best Practices for claims avoidance and resolution.

Dispute Resolution Methods: The committee compares and contrasts the various construction industry practices for dispute resolution. Presented by sub-committee chair Chip Ossman of Ossman Project Management Consulting, Inc.

Delay Claims: Understanding and managing project delays for both the Contractor and the Owner, including a hands-on, practical example. The committee's aggregated Owner and Contractor experiences presented by: Dennis McBride of SEPTA, Craig Lindquist of CCS Group Inc.

Contract Change Clauses: Using the Engineers Joint Contracts document, presenter Dan Becker of HDR Engineering, Inc. provides best practices of change management contract clauses and considerations.

Constructability Reviews: An hour of prevention saves a month of delay. Presenter Ray Jenkins leads us through the committee's experiences of best practices of Constructability Reviews.

Public Private Partnerships: The best claims avoidance may be a different path altogether. Mike Ryan, Schiavone Construction Co. and Juan Santamaria, ACS Infrastructure Development, Inc., provide the best practices of PPP's, including optimum contract considerations and dispute avoidance clauses.
